FINAL ADJOURNMENT HAD.

Resolutions of Thanks to the Vice-President.

The Luiter Expresses His "Enruest Appreciation for the Uniform Courtesy Shown by Members and Officers of the Senate."

Washington, April 15 .- In the Senate Senator Platt spoke at length on the proposed investigation of the record of Senabor Roach, of North Dakota, arguing the right of the Senate to make the investigation. It was the plain duty of the Segute to do so. On an agreement that a yes and may vote be taken on the Roach matter before adjournment a resolution was passed for the appointment of a committee to wait on the president and inform him that the Senate was ready to dling the words "and by whose authority the same was holsted on said buildthe same was hoisted on said building."

Mr. Chandler, rising to a question of personal privilege, said he had not distinctly understood yesterday whether the senator from Indiana (Mr. Voorhees) had said he "might have heard," or he "had heard" certain stats. ments concerning his action as secretary of the navy. Mr. Chandler said he thought he kept pretty good track of the various attacks made on him from time to time both personal and official. But he never heard before of the charges that a ship built under his administration was defective. The ships were the Chicago, Boston, Atlanta and Dolphin, and these ships he thought were very much aftest at this day. Contracts for those ships were made with John Boacl and it could not be to him the senator allued as one of those who retired "rich, contented and infamous."

Mr. Voorhees explained that his remarks yesterday were intended as an illustration of the rosition taken by the senator from New Hampshire and other senators on that side. The language which he used in reference to Mr. Chandwhich he used in reference to Mr. Chandler he had heard by others, and not at a very remote period from the present time.

Mr. Hansbrough also rose to a question of personal privilege, and began by expressing the hope that the Senate would not adjourn without giving his colleague (Mr. Roach) the opportunity asked for by him yesterday. Objection was made by several Democratic senators, and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business.

executive business.

At 5:50 the doors were reopened, and a resolution was a reed to tendering the thanks of the Sena to the vice-president who presided over the Senate during the present extraordinary session. A motion to adjourn sine die was then made by Mr. Hill, and agreed to without discussion.

The Duke D. Veragua and Party Arrive in New York.

DECENDANT OF COLUMBUS.

The Freedom of the City of New York Is Presented Him.

He Is Accompanied by His Wife, So and a Number of Other Spanish Grandees, Decendants of the Discoverer,

New York, April 15.—The steamer New York arrived this morning with the duke of Veragua, a lineal descendant of Columbus, on board, accomposited by his wife, son and a number of other Spanish grandees, direct descendants of the famous discoverer. As soon as the vessel anchored at quarantine, Commander Dickens, of the United States navy, rep resenting the federal government, went on board and delivered an address of welcome in Spanish, to which the duke appropriately replied. Later the reception committee went down the bay in a special steamer and took the party off and landed them at Twenty-second street, North river, and conducted them to Hotel Waldrof, where they will remain till they leave for Chicago next week.

In the cabin of the special steamer on the way to the Twenty-second street dock, General Horace Porter, chairman of the committee on reception, addressed dock, General Horace Porter, chairman of the committee on reception, addressed the duke in French, bidding him wel-come to the city and conferring upon him, under authority of the corporation, the freedom thereof. Parker also re-ferred to the notable achievement of the duke's illustrious ancestor, which opened up a new world, and the fitness of the fact that the duke was selected by Spain to represent her at the celebration of the quardo-centennial anniversary of that event.

The duke replied in French, thanking the committee for the honor done him, and the corporation of New York for the bestowal of the freedom of the city. While proud of the achievements of his ancestor, he felt that the chief credit was due the American people for the marvelous work occomplished in developing the new world. The duchess and the duke's daughter, son and two nephews were then introduced.

duke responded in a complimentary address in Spanish.

He will be the guest of the country, and the state department has already deputed a special representative to tender him silt the courtesies the visit warrants. He is the only living direct descendant of Columbus, through the grand-daughter, Isabella of Cordova. The latter was the child of the famous son of Columbus, the colon de la Cerda, duke de Veragua, marquis de la Jamaica, grand admiral of the Indies. He is one of the few grandees of Spain, and bears the title grand admiral by reason of his descent from Columbus. He has held few offices of note, and, although admiral, has never been at sea. For a time he was minister of puband, although admiral, has never been at sea. For a time he was minister of public works, and is now president of the Spanish cattle commission. He is reputed the finest breeder of bulls in Europe. His pulace in Madrid is a fine old-fashioned structure, said to be worth half a million dollars. He is a Knight of the Grand Cross of Charles III of Spain, an honor which few Spaniards can lay learn to nonor which lew spaniards can lay claim to.

The party arrived at the Hotel Waldorf at 10.45, General Horace Porter escorting the duchess and the duke following with Commander Dickinson. Mayor Gilroy and Colonel McClelland, president of the board of aldermen, met and greeted the party in the state drawing room. General Porter introduced the duke, duchess and the rest of the party to the mayor and the reception committee present, and as at that time all the reception committee had not come, it was decided to postpone presenting the freedom of the city to the duke for an hour. The presentation took place in the state banquet room. The mayor, with a seroll on sentation took place in the state banquet room. The mayor, with a socoll on which was engraved the resolutions conferring the freedom of the city in his hand, addressed the duke in these words: "Your grace, it affords me very great pleasure to give you in behalf of the people of the city of New York a cordial and hearty reception. In honoring you we honor the memory of the discoverer of America, whose lineal descendent you are. His discovery contributed very much to civilization, and mindful of this fact I have the honor to present to you the

The duke replied in English in these words: "I thank you very much for your distinguished consideration. You may count on my friendship. I shall think myself very much honored by your attention." The informal reception then followed and Mrs. Gilroy, Mrs. Dickinson and Mrs. Bolt assisted in receiving the ladies of the ducal party.

The resolutions conferring the freedom of the city are written in red and black ink on parchment mounted upon a scroll of blue ink with blue satin back, the whole in a morocco case. The duke spent the afternoon in driving about the city. Shortly after luncheon, the duke, his brother Marquis Barbolis, accompanied by Commander Dickinson, returned the mayor's official call. ayor's official call.

The union proposes to enlist as far as possible all railway employees of every description and its avowed object is the abolishment of strikes and boycotts and the eradication of heavy taxes and dues which members of the various organizations are now compelled to pay.

The founder of the union claims the organization will in no sense conflict with existing orders. Its design primarily, they say, is for a great number of men who belong to no organization whatever. Besides the regulation of labor troubles the organization contemplates several side issues, such as an employment bureau and insurance department. The affair caused great excitement. Further trouble is feared. In Gheat to-day the strikers incensed by a number of weavers quit work and attacked them, severely injuring many. When the police interfered the mob turned on them and wounded some with stones and put them to rout. Leaving the rioters in presenting to rout, leaving the rioters in possessing of that part of the town. Finally a depilabed and with little bloodshed, the revolution seemingly having public support. When the Dumers reached Ceiba a few days after the capture the officers were very much surprised to have new men in new uniforms come aboard and transact the necessary business.

General Francisco Guerro returned from exile, assumed command of the revolutationary troops at Ceiba and captured the fortifications after a desperate struggle of fortifications after a desperate struggle of loud cherring that there would be a loud cherring that there would be a
